At home once more. I must defer my remarks on our splendid Meeting at Fitzbury & the better than splendid hospitality of Mrs Drake till another time. Mr. Storey has abused me soundly for my delay of this. But for this principle for I have had punishment enough. Yours Ever

I must conclude. We had a most pleasant night at Springfield. We got a nice room up stairs at the Hotel - a fire - a sofa - some chairs - the Numbers of the Commonwealth, and our slippers, and we had as cozy a time as I ever enjoyed. Notwithstanding little drawbacks I have been greatly pleased with my trip and am now well rested. I will try and do the better for my pause from labour.

For Ball Bon Lear again. Love to all.

Your own loving
